GIRLS.
When Adam wooed the charming Eve,
There were no 10-cent magazines;
But, had there been, I now believe,
In glaring reds and blues and greens, Some artist would have pictured her,
To set the brain of man awhirl; Expressing thus the popular Conception of "the fig-leaf girl."

Since then the hoopskirt girl we've known—
The girl who wore the poisonous—Once gave a magazine some tone And won for it its share of praise.
The tandem girl we used to view, The roller-skating girl we've seen; For girls adopt each fad that's new In every 10-cent magazine.

The bathing girl, the golfing girl, We've had—the girl for outdoor sport;
The dancing girl, with dress awirl,
The girl upon the tennis court;
The girl who runs a chafing dish,
The bridge-whist girl who trumps your ace.

The summer girl who likes to fish,
The winter girl with laughing face.
The autumn girl with crown of leaves,
The Lenten girl in gown of gray;
The college girl, in flowing sleeves, Have each and every had their day;
Just now the auto girl is queen,
But soon she'll cease to be the rage;
Tomorrow in some magazine
The airship girl will rule the page.

DR. ROUTZAHN AND PROMISCUOUS EXPECTORATION.

The little woman who so far forgets herself to allow herself to appear on the streets with a trailing gown, whether through the ethics of inadequate common sense or just plain ordinary "style," and who is bent upon being just as unsanitary and just as "trailing" as she pleases while engaged in the pleasant practice of delegating herself as a committee of one to mop up the streets with the hem of her gown, has found a champion in Dr. Routzahn, the good-natured anti-tuberculosis man who is working around locally and doing stunts generally for the love of the thing and forswear humanity's sake.
Dr. Routzahn is going to make the men stop spitting.

He knows the ways of women, evidently, and feels away down deep in his heart of hearts that in attempting to bring about a dress reform, he would call down the wrath of the 20th century goddesses upon his defenseless head.

He knows that.
So he is going to put it up to the men.
It's horrid to spit, anyhow.
If you are a man, get some pretty little woman to tell you about it.
After she tells you how her foolish gowns are spoiled and dragged and placed in perfectly awful conditions, by one appearance on Palafox street, you'll probably decide at once that all men—that spit—are indeed deep-dyed

YOUNG GIRL'S GOWN OF CASHMERE.
A pretty and stylish dress for a girl of 10 or 12 years is here pictured. This little gown is of cashmere, having a cream ground with a plaid of bright blue and trimmed with bands of taffeta matching the blue in the material. Its lines are graceful and becoming, the center panel and waist cut in one, giving a princess effect to the little gown. The skirt is side-pleated and finished at the bottom by two deep tucks above the hem. A scarf of the blue taffeta is passed through the slashes made in the material at the top of the bodice and ties at the front in a four-in-hand.
With this is worn a gump of tucked batiste.

villains who ought to be lynched, immediately.
But don't do it—don't lynch them, you know.
It wouldn't be practicable, anyhow, and the authorities might object.
See Dr. Routzahn.

The doctor has organized an association to be known as the "No Spit" league—dainty, isn't it?—the motto of which is to be "Lest We Forget—and Spit," the countersign, "Don't spit," the battle cry, "No Spit, No Consumption," and the platform, "Man Spits Because of Bad Health and Bad Habits." The pledge that each member has to take is as follows:

1. I will not spit when it is not necessary.
2. I will spit carefully when I do spit.
3. I will make an effort that each spit may be my last spit.
(These rules are for the gentlemen —if you think they are crazy, well—you just ought to meet Dr. Routzahn!)

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Van DeMark, of Houston, Texas, who were the guests of friends and relatives in this city for the Mardi Gras celebration, left for their home, Tuesday night. Mrs. Van DeMark was formerly Miss Josie Bonifay, and her many friends were glad to greet her again as well as to form the acquaintance of her husband. This was the latter's first visit to Pensacola, and he was charmed with the city and her people. Mr. VanDeMark is on the staff of the Houston Post. The couple were the recipients of many social attentions during their brief stay here.

Miss Callie Gentry and brothers, Messrs. Jack and Frank Gentry, who were the guests of Mrs. Dave Wilson on South Rens street, have returned to their home in Milton.

Mrs. W. D. Hoyt and Mr. Joe Martin, of Montgomery, Ala., who were the guests in this city of Mrs. W. P.
Bonifay, on Romana street, have returned home.

"YOUR DESSERT IS DELICIOUS." That's a frequent remark heard about desserts flavored with Blue Ribbon lemon or vanilla extract.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

Skirts still grow narrower.

Shot materials are very popular.

Whole frocks are being made of fur.

Heavy Venetian lace is in high favor.

New suspenders are narrow like fabric.

Fur-covered buttons are especially smart.

The gored sheath skirt is a favorite model.

An exquisite new fabric is cashmere de sole.

The majority of women's handkerchiefs are colored.

Fur ornaments for the hair are in great popularity.

There is a furore for mother of pearl with evening dress.

Beautiful afternoon frocks are being made of crepe de chine.

The linings of the fashionable coats are usually of satin.

Chiffon broadcloth of the new carpet shade is very stylish.

Predictions grow stronger that spring hats will be of moderate size.

Collarettes of ostrich feathers are seen in all colors and shapes.

White, gray, mauve and reseda are popular shades for lining coats.

Some toques of black chiffon are completely covered with jet bangles.

One of the new fabrics is silk with a stitch of silver running through it.

A popular overcoat for men is having of very light gray oxford cloth.

Limerick, Brussels applique and old needle-point lace are much in request.

Men are rejoicing in gay attire just now in the matter of evening waistcoats. They are of black satin with mother of pearl and moonstone buttons.

The braiding which has been in so great vogue has almost been overdone.

Many of the new spring waists are of net, embroidered in a color and gold.

A very new idea is that of applying Mexican drawn work to serge and thin cloth.

Madras collars for men are being shown extensively in the shops these days.

Some fashionable women of Paris are wearing daring little curls over the temples.

A beautiful new hair ornament is the laurel leaf in enamel and frosty jewels.

Latest turbans are not so engulfing; they allow part of the front hair to be seen.

The latest French fashion in shoes is patent-leather with tan-color tops and pearl buttons.

The deep cream color called cafe au lait and a pure chalk white are colors of the moment.

Some separate coats for dressy afternoon wear are entirely covered with "vermicelli" braiding.

One of the characteristic models of the present season is the coat with the fancy outline.

A peculiar feature of present day fashions is the combination of thick and thin fabrics.

However extravagant styles may be in other ways, they are decidedly economical in materials.

The semi-princess dress is a style that looks well on either the slender or full figure.

A few of the white petticoats have a flounce embroidered in colored dots, pale pink and blue.

Toques have gained ground with remarkable rapidity and are quite pushing out the larger hats.

A great effort is being made by tailors to keep the short-skirted tailor-made dress in vogue.

Besides the Magyar toque and the bushy, there is a new decorative turban of cloth or velvet.

China cups and saucers, gilded so that they cannot be told at first from brass, are very popular.

The vogue of the surprise waist shows none of those signs that herald diminished popularity.

Small girls are adorable in the new Glengarry bonnet with plaid band, jaunty rosette and quill.

Instead of being embroidered, the new waists are stencilled in the most charming designs and colors.

A new handbag is known as the "English mail bag." It is large, flat, almost square, with strap handles.

There is quite a fad now for wearing the new hand-painted lace blouses with dressy tailor-made suits.

Fewer transparent fabrics are in use just now than before, the very close, sheath-fitting skirt came into vogue.

The heavy linen crepe is coming to be much used for separate waists. It comes in black and white, hand-embroided.

The jumper frock is still a favorite for young girls. It is modified by having the raised waistline at the back.

Mephisto quills are generally fur tails, wired and bent back to resemble the quills on the head of the medieval devil.

The separate waist has been making a desperate fight for life against the growing popularity of the threepiece suit.

For morning wear about the house nothing is more attractive than the freshly laundered shirtwaist dress of linen or lawn.

A variation of the manner of wearing the fur stole is to twist it serpentine fashion around the figure from throat to waist.

Dressmakers have declared that the best width for the present day clinging skirt around the bottom is two yards and a little over.

a long time. Doctors had failed to help me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegeta-

Another Woman Cured.

Jersey cloth and albatross are both being worn for the tops of petticoats this winter. They are warm and at the same time close-fitting.

For smart afternoon wear pale-toned gloves are now the thing in Paris. The tones most in use are rose, pearl, fawn and butter yellow.

There is a general impression abroad that the last word has been said on the subject of winter suits, and yet every day one sees something new and different.

One of the most persuasive of the new waists is made in an admirable wash crepon—half silk, half cotton.
The material is more dressy than the cotton crepes that were introduced last year.

Fashion has never evolved a more charming mode than the high-waisted gown of the present season, with its long, unbroken lines and its subtle suggestion of classic dignity and grace.

Among the Oriental fashions in vogue this winter is the Mameluke toque, which is a kind of fez. It is ordinarily made of velvet and worn low on the head; and is unusual rather than beautiful.

Fashionable women are seen at the theatres and restaurants wearing a scarf of black tulle wound around the throat and left to float about the shoulders. It may be quite unorna-mented or embroidered with gold thread or precious stones.

A reversal of the old accustomed order is the use of chiffon over lace, not only on the bodices of evening gowns, but in the separate waists as
